J.C. Nichols Prize for Visionaries in Urban Development

Honoring Visionaries Who Inspire Great Places
Call for nominations

The ULI J.C. Nichols Prize for Visionaries in Urban Development recognizes an individual, or a person representing an institution, who has taken visionary approaches to city building. The prize spotlights those on the cutting edge, who are employing innovative techniques, strategies, and insights to encourage and achieve the highest quality in development practices and policies globally.

The $100,000 prize honors the Kansas City, Missouri, developer Jesse Clyde Nichols (1880–1950), a founding ULI member.

Visit uli.org/nichols by December 31, 2019, to submit your nomination for the 2020 laureate!
